Kathy Plumb contacted the RS ladies asking for things about their lives that everyone else might not know. Some of them were read to us by Shannon Bludworth to see if we could guess who she was talking about. This is the list that she read from:

1. I was traveling in Germany with a youth group and I needed to shower, and not knowing the situation I decided to leave my glasses safely behind. I showered and returned to my dorm room.

The next day, with my glasses ON this time, I realized that I had showered in the men's locker room! Fortunately, I didn't notice another soul (or man) in the locker room with me!

2. When I was growing up I wanted to look like Haley Mills. She was always so optimistic and happy about life in general and wanted everyone around her to have this outlook in her movies. She was the cutest and I loved her British accent.

3. I graduated from High School at the age of 17, from Monaro High School in Cooma, New South Wales, Australia.

4. I met my future husband on a blind date to visit the Salt Lake City Cemetery and ended with me getting a ticket and having to appear in Juvenile Court. He lovingly called me his "little Juvenile Delinquent!"

5. In college I spent the night at the YMCA Surf Camp in California to learn to surf. On my very first attempt to surf, I lost my balance and sprained my ankle. I had expected there to be more water between me and the sand and wasn't ready for the impact. I was bummed and embarrassed, but on the bright side, I spent the next day skipping all the lines in my wheelchair at Disneyland with two of the hottest boys on our trip. Not too bad of an experience after all. Sadly, I've never tried to surf again.

6. I was a Candy Striper (youth volunteer) at Primary Childrens' Hospital for three summers in a row during my high school years.

7. When I was about 5 or 6, my mom had to leave to work in the morning before I went to school. She would get me ready, and then leave. I would watch cartoons until it was time to leave and catch the school bus. One morning, I was watching cartoons when a bee flew over my head. I was so scared, I put a blanket over my head and sat there for an hour before I was brave enough to call my mom and tell her I missed the bus. Needless to say I missed school that day and enjoyed a full day of cartoons.

8. The first time I rappelled (climbing down rocks) I did a 100 ft free fall at the end.

9. I have a snake phobia; so big that I can't even see them on pictures or in movies. One day I was having a dream that a snake was about to bite me as I was walking on a trail. Right in that portion of my dream, I felt something on my face. I reacted quick, punching whatever it was; and woke up to a "Sweetie! It's me!" My poor husband was giving me a goodbye kiss as he was leaving to work. We had just had a baby back then, and he advised me to be careful to not punch the baby, who was laying next to me.

10. I am very ticklish. When I got my first pedicure they started filing my feet and I tried so hard to control myself, but failed miserably. I ended up kicking the file out of the nail technician's hand and nearly kicking her in the face.

11. I was born in Salt Lake City and got married to a Marine when I was 18 and have since lived in San Diego, California, Belvedere, South Carolina, Murray and Sandy Utah. My husband went to Korea when we had just been married for two months, and was gone for a year. Some Honeymoon, HUH?

12. I walked down the red carpet after Catherine Zeta-Jones at one of her movie premiers.

13. I play the accordion.

14. I was featured in an article in the Church News, many, many years ago. I was attending a Community College, was a member of the Institute Board, attending all of my Church meetings, and paying my tithing. This was before I was a baptized member of the Church. I guess that I was a Human Interest story.

15. One thing that people don't know about me is that my dream job is to be a Supreme Court judge.

16. I went on a hike in Nine Mile Canyon with my ten-year-old daughter and we found a man who had died while he was hiking there.

17. I had an appendectomy when I was in the 4th grade. Before I was rushed into surgery I asked my doctor to please save my appendix for me. He kindly obliged and gave it to me in a jar of formaldehyde! I took my appendix to school for show-and-tell when I recovered. It's safe to say that I was the most popular girl in school that day!!

18. One of the things that I'm most proud of was riding a "century" a few years ago. It's a 100-mile-road-bike race. I was going to do it with one of my best friends who is an experienced rider, but her grandfather passed away right before the race and his funeral was that weekend. I was super scared to do it without a friend, but I had trained so hard and finished it in around 5 hours.

19. Ok, my deep dark secret is that I love Strawberry Shortcake and own all of the original dolls in their boxes! I used to daydream about having my own secret hideout covered in everything Strawberry Shortcake!

20. I sang and danced with the Young Ambassadors at BYU in the 1970's.

21. I don't like cooking. So one Monday night for Family Home Evening, I whipped up some boxed stuffing with a chopped onion and talked about what the pioneers ate.

22. When I was in 5th grade I was voted Vice President of my school. The janitor was having a hard time with the students keeping their classrooms clean. So my friend and I came up with the Golden Garbage Can idea. Every week the janitor would choose who had the cleanest classroom that week. On Monday when you came to class, the Golden Garbage Can would be in your classroom if the janitor picked your class. We kept a chart in the gym and when it was in your class, we put a star on the chart. At the end of the year, whichever class had the most stars got a prize. The students loved it. When I went back to visit the school 15 years later, the Golden Garbage Can was still there.

23. I was obsessed with Hot Wheels cars when I was in the 4th grade. The floor of my bedroom was covered with the cars and their little orange tracks.  I taught Aerobics Classes in the 80's. I could still fit into my old leg warmers. My old leotards, not so much.  When I was 10, I learned the hard way that I should keep my dresser drawers closed. One night when I didn't, my cat crawled into my underwear drawer and gave birth to a litter of kittens.

24. In high school I was voted as having the "Prettiest feet and hands". Yup, that's me. PS: I should amend that it was in Girls' gym. Ha-ha!

25. I was in the High School Pep Club. We cheered and marched at all the football and basketball games.

26. I have a twin sister and we didn't look at all alike.

27. I have flown across the Pacific Ocean 20 times (Boy, are my arms tired!) I also really like the taste of escargot and caviar.

28. I grew up in the city, but my dad grew up on a farm in Idaho, so he brought a little bit of farm life to our family. We had chickens, a cow, a couple of horses, and a pig. When the chickens stopped laying eggs, Dad decided it time for them to be chicken dinner, so he would cut off their heads. The chickens would run around and chase us kids all around the backyard. Then Dad would dip them in boiling water and our job was to pluck off the feathers. I still remember that smell.

29. Every year my mother would make us wash everything by hand. We didn't have any hot water and we didn't have a washing machine. But we had to have everything clean and new clothes on New Year's Day. We had to boil the water in order to clean. We did not have running water. From the sixth grade on it was my job to get buckets of water and carry it on my shoulders. We went to a Bath-house to bathe.

30. I, along with my husband, helped rescue more than 150 baby turtles on a beach in Barbados. It was one of the coolest experiences ever!

31. I grew up in Draper and at that time it was known as the Egg Basket of Utah. Our farm had around 5,000 chickens, and believe me, chicken farming was not easy. In the winter it snowed a lot and not having many homes around the area like it does now, the wind would blow really hard and blew the snow into drifts. We were drifted-in many times. Dad built a toboggan and we would put the cases of eggs in it and pull it to the Draper Poultry Plant. It was not easy, but we made of game of it, and had lots of fun doing it.

32. When I was a young girl, our family went to a public swimming pool that we had never been to before. When I was ready to swim I tiptoed to the pool. I didn't notice who was there because I was too self-conscious of the large birthmark on my right leg. Once I got in the pool, the lifeguard told me I had to get out because it was Boys Only in the pool for the next 15 minutes. Was I embarrassed! Everyone was looking at me. Fortunately, we never had a reason to go back to that pool again.

33. I taught aerobics in the 80's at the Spa Fitness Center. In high school (70's) I was in the Olympus High Pep Club.

34. I can work on puzzles for hours.

35. I was in a movie with James Caan, James Earl Jones, and Angelica Houston. The movie was "Gardens of Stone."

36. I was my Elementary School hopscotch and marble champ. I attended Greek School just like the girls in the movie My Big Fat Greek Wedding.

37. When I was going to BYU, I had two dates on the day of Homecoming. The first guy asked me to go target shooting, since I was already going to the dance with another guy. We went target shooting and he brought out a rifle with a large scope on it to let me see what it was like to shoot it. I didn't hold the rifle close enough and tight enough on my shoulder so when I shot it, the recoil was so hard that the scope went right between my eyes and into my forehead. We spent the next couple of hours at the BYU Clinic putting butterfly bandages between my eyes, to hold the skin together so I wouldn't have to have stitches. That night instead of being able to go to the dance with the other guy, I spent the night in my apartment. I had to tell my date that I couldn't go to the dance because of what I done on my previous date that day. Neither one of the guys ever asked me out again.

38. I kissed President Monson once.

39. While attending Utah State University I was chosen to be the Peace Rose Queen.
